Our featured speaker, Tessa Skiles, Media & Communications, Howard T. Odum Florida Springs Institute

Tessa has grown up around freshwater springs and is driven by a strong passion to preserve and protect Florida's water so that future generations can enjoy the springs as she has. Tess has a background in marketing, filmmaking, public speaking, event coordination, and GIS mapping. She has an optimistic approach to a difficult topic. Her preferred method of outreach intertwine's science and creative, high energy digital media. She uses this method as a tool to reach a younger generation and introduce a positive approach to protecting our environment. She is known as a successor of her late father, Wes Skiles, who was a respected cave diver, National Geographic Explorer, and cinematographer. In her free time, she enjoys free-diving and photography. With her work and hobbies, most of the time this lands her at springs all around the state but she also enjoys traveling to discover new places and photographing all of nature's wonders, above and below water."

Florida Springs: A Looking Glass Into Florida's Water and it's Future

Freshwater springs are a looking glass into the health of Florida's most vital natural resource, water. During this lecture, you will learn where your drinking water is coming from, the journey it takes underneath our feet, and why it is so incredibly important for us to preserve this resource.

We are losing our beautiful Florida Springs at a rapid rate. What can YOU do to protect and preserve them?.
